Through the Garden

To coincide with this exhibition Tim Martin has been working with schools, colleges and family groups across Devon to create several large 'landscape' sculptures

This ambitious participatory project compliments an exhibition of original works by William Morris at RHS Garden Rosemoor.

The sculptures also make links between the town of Torrington, its unique Common lands and the landscape gardens at Rosemoor.

A limited number of tickets to access the sculptures at RHS Garden Rosemoor are available from the artist. Please contact

Through the Garden - New sculptural works by Tim Martin

RHS Garden Rosemoor, The Plough Arts Centre and the Common lands at Great Torrington, North Devon present new works inspired by the sites in which they are located. This ambitious participatory project is the result of working with schools, colleges and open workshops to facilitate the creation of large 'multi-stake' sculptural works. Firstly responding to an exhibition of original William Morris designs at Rosemoor; secondly making visual links between Rosemoor, the unique Common lands and Torrington town itself; thirdly complimenting Tim Martin's solo exhibition of paintings at The Plough Arts Centre Gallery.
